GOD? IT'S COMPLEX

YOUNG AMERICANS INCREASINGLY HAVE DOUBTS ABOUT DIVINE CREATOR

CNN

WASHINGTON For heaven's sake.

The percentage of Americans 30 and younger who harbor some doubts about God's existence appears to be growing quickly, according to a recent Pew Research Center survey. While most young Americans—68 percent—told Pew they never doubt God's existence, that's a 15-point drop in just five years.

In 2007, 83 percent of American Millennials said they never doubted God's existence. More young people are expressing doubts about God now than at any time since Pew started asking the question a decade ago. Thirty-one percent disagreed with the statement "I never doubt the existence of God," double the number who disagreed with it in 2007.

When asked about doubts of God, no other generation showed a change of more than 2 percent in the past five years.

The survey found that the percentage of Millennials who identify with a religion is remaining constant, while most other generations have seen religious identification increase in the past 10 years.

The findings about Millennials and religion were part of a 168-page report that Pew released June 4 but largely were overlooked.

"Notably, people younger than 30 are substantially less likely than older people to say prayer is an important part of their lives," the report said. "Research on generational patterns shows that this is not merely a lifecycle effect."

The Millennial generation is far less religious than were other preceding generations when they were the same age years ago." The findings are part of Pew's 2012 American Values Survey, which touches on issues including political partisanship, gay marriage and abortion.

THE BIGGER PICTURE

Despite the findings on Millennials, the survey shows the U.S. continues to be a highly religious nation, with most Americans identifying with a particular faith. Seventy-six percent of all respondents said prayer is an important part of their lives and agreed that "we all will be called before God at the Judgment Day to answer for our sins." About 80 percent said they have never doubted the existence of God.

Hug your dad for me this weekend

My dad died when I was 14.

I was going to start eighth grade the next day. My mom and I were coming home from school shopping when she got the call.

I remember everything about that day. The smell of the new shoes I got. Noticing how much bigger I actually was than my mom when I hugged her. How ridiculously thirsty you get after crying a lot.

It was easily one of the worst days of my life.

Part of me wanted to write this column about how Father's Day doesn't get its fair shake stacked against other holidays, but that's not the point, really. The point is that having a father (or quality father figure) is something that should never be taken for granted.

Allow me to elaborate.

Losing my main male role model before the crapstorm that is high school and being too proud and scared to find a new one to teach me the ropes, I approached learning how to be a "real man" like you would approach taking a geometry test. Be it subscribing to Esquire at a young age or buying a bunch of books with titles like "How to be the Manliest Man Who Has Ever Had Chest Hair," I did it all.

I wanted my dad to be there to tell me how to navigate my adolescent life, but he was gone. And my mom was at work. And there I was, alone.

So I started learning. I also started talking to everyone and haven't really stopped since. I started telling jokes because I was sad a lot and figured laughing was easier than being unhappy.

From learning how to be assertive when it comes to dating to how to tie a tie, I had to make do with what I had.

I learned some lessons quickly, but most took repeated knocks on the head. I learned that beer tasted nasty (until one day it didn't, thank God). And that in Chicago Heights, sometimes you have to fight your way out of a party.

I'm about to turn 27 and I'm still not all the way there. It wouldn't be an exaggeration to say that I would pay anything to see my dad and talk to him for a few minutes. To pick his brain about girl issues and work and getting older.

I don't get that opportunity, but there are a lot of you who do. My advice: NEVER take that for granted. Go talk to your dad this weekend. Learn as much as you can. Buy him a gift. Just enjoy the time.

And do me a favor: Never buy that book about the chest hair thing. It really sucks.

'They did a number on me'

Chicago Tribune

The 23-year-old man didn't think much about it when a large group of teenagers got on the Red Line train as he, his wife and a friend returned from a weekend concert at Wrigley Field—especially since a girl in the group was clutching a baby.

But their enjoyable evening out Saturday quickly took a violent turn.

Someone in the group began yelling at the girl, causing her to walk away, then began hitting another teen in the group, the man said Wednesday.

"This was right next to my friend, so I put my arm over her to make sure she wouldn't get hit," said the man, who asked not to be identified out of concern for his safety.

The man's wife stood up to get away from the group but left her iPhone on the seat. One of the teens snatched it up and said, "I'll take this."

The man said he told the teen to give the phone back, but the teen ran for the door and the man lunged toward him.

"Then I got swarmed by the whole group," said the man. "They were just pounding me. I was just trying to protect my head as much as I could, I knew there was nothing I could do about it. I was stuck. They did a number on me."

The attack lasted just seconds, and all the man could remember was fists coming at him. The group jumped out as the train pulled into the State and Lake stop and the doors slid open.

The man said he, his wife and their friend followed the teens onto the platform, where other riders were waiting. "They saw me fall out of the train, covered with blood, and they saw the group of kids run," he said.

They all went up to the street and, after what seemed like 15 minutes, they found police officers who called for an ambulance.

The victim was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital and treated for a concussion, a fractured orbital bone under his left eye, two cracked teeth and a cut over his left eye that required six stitches, he said. He and his wife and friend didn't leave the hospital until 6 a.m. Sunday.

The man, a computer engineer, said his doctor has advised him not to go to work for two weeks.

The man said he is convinced the group set up a ruse to rob them or simply to attack them.

"It was so incredibly, perfectly timed," he said. "We saw the other kid get up, the one who was being beat, and he got up and looked unscathed and just got up and left."

There's nothing that leads me to believe that this was an accident."

He faulted the CTA for not having proper security.

"I would put the blame on the CTA. ... I had CTA security pass me on the platform as I'm sitting there dripping in blood and nobody even stopped to see what was going on," he said.

Groupon soon will offer a deal on three-day CTA passes. JOSÉ M. OSORIO/TRIBUNE

Groupon deal: Ride the CTA!

Chicago Tribune

CTA officials could hardly jump fast enough at the tantalizing offer from discount deal-maker Groupon to take 250,000, and potentially a half-million, of the transit agency's slow-selling three-day passes off its hands for almost $2 million.

The passes are targeted to attract tourists and infrequent CTA riders to buses and trains, at least to try the service, if not to become repeat customers.

But the CTA sold only about 635,000 of the unlimited-ride three-day passes in all of 2011, officials on Wednesday told the transit agency's board, which rubber-stamped an ordinance approving the deal with Groupon that was announced earlier in the day by the mayor's office.

The cash-strapped CTA will pocket $1,882,000 from Groupon for 250,000 passes, with an option for Groupon to purchase an additional 250,000 passes within a year for the same price, which breaks down to $7.53 wholesale for each three-day pass. Groupon will own the passes and offer them to its online members for $9, instead of the standard $14.

CTA tests the batteries on all-electric buses

Chicago Tribune

The CTA's board on Wednesday approved the purchase of two all-electric buses for a test expected to begin in late 2013.

Using a federal grant, the CTA awarded a $2.5 million contract to bus manufacturer New Flyer for two all-electric buses. The CTA fleet currently is made up of diesel and hybrid diesel-electric buses.

The test is the first of its kind by a large public transit agency in the Midwest, officials said.

It will determine how well the buses handle extreme high and low temperatures under heavy passenger loads.

The plug-in buses are capable of traveling up to 100 miles between charges, CTA spokesman Brian Steele said.

Witness: Sandusky threatened me

6 BELLEFONTE, Pa. Three accusers testified Wednesday that Jerry Sandusky sexually assaulted them, often offering up football tickets, gifts and attention in a bid to win their trust. One said he was told he'd never see his family again if he said anything.

The accusers spoke with conviction to jurors at the former Penn State assistant football coach's sex abuse trial, yet they also grappled with trying emotional circumstances as they recalled events that took place years earlier.

One man, now 25, said Sandusky pinned him down and performed oral sex on him, threatened to keep him from seeing his family if he reported what happened and then later told him he loved him.

The man, called Victim 10 by prosecutors, told jurors that Sandusky assaulted him in the basement of the ex-coach's State College home in the late 1990s. The witness was in foster care at the time and occasionally stayed over at the Sandusky home.

"He told me that if I ever told anyone that I'd never see my family again," the accuser testified.

Later, Sandusky offered a more conciliatory tone.

"He apologized for saying that," the witness said. "He told me he didn't mean it and that he loved me."

Sandusky is on trial on 52 criminal counts involving alleged assaults against 10 boys over a 15-year span.

Sandusky, 68, has denied the allegations. His attorneys have suggested his accusers have financial motivations for coming forward.

Kyle Korver and everyone else who's worn a Bulls uniform the past 20 years has practiced at the Berto Center. PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

SO LONG, SUBURBS

BULLS TRADE DEERFIELD PRACTICE SITE FOR DOWNTOWN DIGS

Chicago Tribune

The Bulls announced overnight Wednesday that they are moving their practice facility from suburban Deerfield to downtown Chicago.

The Tribune exclusively reported the potential move last month.

In a statement, the team said the new facility, which has no timetable and will be privately funded, "could include additional features that would allow the team to expand its use of the building, particularly during non-practice times. Some ideas under consideration include event and educational space, and greater digital and video production capabilities."

Team and real estate sources indicated the team has considered creating a restaurant- and entertainment-based complex on the east end of the United Center, modeled after the successful "L.A. Live" outside the Staples Center in L.A.

In the statement, chief operating officer and President Michael Reinsdorf explained the decision to leave the Sheri L. Berto Center, which opened in September 1992. He credited Mayor Emanuel for pitching team Chairman Jerry Reinsdorf.

"Mayor Emanuel has done a tremendous job promoting investment in the City of Chicago," Jerry Reinsdorf said in the statement. "The Mayor stressed that the Bulls brand is important to the city, nationally and internationally, and that the Bulls represent the spirit and competitive grit of Chicago. He thought centralizing our team assets inside the city limits would be a show of our ongoing commitment to Chicago."

Reinsdorf also cited the potential benefit of eliminating players' commute on game days from Deerfield.

Reinsdorf confirmed the Bulls will sell their current facility. Sources indicated the new facility could keep the same name, which honors Jerry Reinsdorf's longtime assistant who died following routine surgery on Nov. 23, 1991.

The move is disappointing for some fans. Growing up on the North Shore, Josh Carl and his friends were often thrilled to spot Bulls players near the Berto Center.

Before the team built the Berto Center in 1992, the players practiced on a single court at the Multiplex health club in Deerfield—a fairly public setting for star athletes.

"You almost had direct access to see players walking around Multiplex while you were working out or playing," said Carl, now 36 and the owner of a basketball clinic in Deerfield.

Learning that the Bulls are moving practices to Chicago brought back old memories for Carl.

"It's almost a little bit of a sad day to be honest," he said. "When the Bulls used to practice there, it was just the greatest thing. You would see them around Northbrook Court [shopping center] and it was a special thing for the kids."

KNEE-JERK REACTION

Just like the rest of the world, when RedEye staffers hear the news, we have our opinions—serious or not-so-serious. Here are reactions to Bulls moving their practice facility to downtown Chicago.

Georgia Garvey @gcgarvey

The real losers here are the Deerfield real estate agents, who must be crying into their sensible navy blue blazers at the loss of all that sweet athlete cash.

Mike Hines @givemetexture

As long as they play their games in Chicago, I don't care where they practice. (Hint, hint, Chicago Fire...)

Phil Thompson @Myphilly

Shots "from way downtown" just won't be as impressive anymore.

Chris Sosa @redeyesportsch

Anything to avoid fender benders involving Bentleys on the Kennedy. Right, D-Rose?

Jimmy Greenfield @kgreenx

Now it's going to be even harder for Michael Bush to get into Paris Club.

1 Who should be the next Cubs hitting coach?	Michael Barrett.	Anyone who changes the previous, "Eh, get on base if you feel like it" policy.	Jesus Christ himself, because he's the only one who can help this team now.	Fine. Twist my arm, I'll do it. Rule No. 1: Hit the ball.	A tee. They really need to go back to basics.
2 What's Matt Forte doing while his Bears teammates are at minicamp?	Counting the millions of dollars he already has as he yearns for millions and millions more.	Collecting football cards of himself. Nothing weird about trading one of you to yourself for another one of you.	Tweeting about how he didn't want to go to their stinky ol' camp anyway.	Sitting by the phone. Wondering if he missed any calls while in the bathroom.	Working out with me. He's getting really good at avoiding tackles.
3 Adam Dunn playing left field is like ...	... me competing in a NASCAR race in my Ford Focus.	I have no interest in what Adam Dunn does or does not do.	... me caring about the White Sox.	Wait, what? He still has a glove?	... me trying to take the Red Line.
4 What do you expect from Tiger Woods in the U.S. Open?	A hole-in-one. And that's before he even arrives at the course.	This face. You can't see it, but I'm doing a great Tiger Woods impression right now.	Approximately a hundred "hole-in-one" and ball jokes on Twitter every time he steps up.	He'll either totally embarrass everyone else or totally embarrass himself.	As long as he stays out of the woods where my relatives live, he'll be fine.
5 Who is Alex Monteiro De Lima?	The most recent Formula 1 champ. That's why no one knows who he is.	I have no idea. Did you accidentally receive his mail or something?	I heard you killed his father, so you should prepare to die.	The next Bond movie supervillain. Blofeld, Zorin and now De Lima!	The next Bulls superstar—20 years from now.

Rene and Jason Collins

PAIR OF ACES

Lightning strikes twice for married golfers

By Georgia Garvey

REDEYE

The odds of hitting a hole-in-one? Don't bet on it. And when it comes to a husband and wife hitting holes-in-one during the same round, the chances approach "winning the lottery" levels.

But married couple Jason and Rene Collins, both of Park Ridge, beat those odds, both hitting holes-in-one June 3 at their country club course.

Jason, 41, who works in Chicago for Wilson sporting goods, said he and his wife, were playing a husband/wife tournament in Park Ridge.

Collins hit his hole-in-one on No. 5, from 183 yards. After he struck the ball, he said, "That's pretty good," then changed his mind when he noticed the ball bounce twice and go directly into the cup.

"It was surreal," he said. "My wife was pretty excited just for that. She was running around."

But Rene, 46, soon had her own reason to celebrate. On the 17th hole, she approached the tee and, according to her husband, shouted to the group with which they played, "All right. Last chance to one-up my husband." A small ridge prevented the foursome from watching her ball go into the hole, but they discovered it in the cup when they approached the green.

"It's so hard to believe," Jason Collins said.

Schnizz happens

What's after 'SNL' for Andy Samberg? The comedic role he was born to play

By Matt Pals | REDEYE

Yes, Andy Samberg has a similar name and kinda-similar face to Adam Sandler. Yet perhaps the main reason Samberg was the obvious choice to play Sandler's character's child in "That's My Boy" is that, just like a devoted son who stands by his dad, Samberg has admired his fellow "Saturday Night Live" alum despite all his Razzie nominations and badly reviewed movies.

In the film, opening Friday, Todd (Samberg) isn't so loyal. He's separated himself from his dad, Donny Burger (Sandler), who fathered Todd as a teenager with one of his teachers, but raised Todd (real name: Ilan Solo) on his own like a tiny designated driver. Days before Todd's wedding to Jamie (Leighton Meester), Donny poses as Todd's best friend to wrangle the boy into a family reunion, which will be taped by a reality TV show and save Donny from going to prison for tax evasion.

At the Peninsula Hotel a few hours before he fired a G-string gun into the Chicago Theatre crowd during a taping of "Conan," 33-year-old Samberg talked about the perfection of the role, the possible offensiveness of Sandler's movies and if Lorne Michaels tried to persuade him to stay at "SNL."

Separated at birth? Adam Sandler and Andy Samberg play father and son in the new comedy "That's My Boy."

You've said you stalked Adam Sandler for this role. How challenging was it to have to pretend to hate someone who was your idol? Well, he's acting like such a [bleep] the whole time. [Laughs.]

That made it easier?

That's the trick of acting is acting. You pretend! It's nice 'cause by the end we get to have some fun together too. It's not just me being an uptight prick the whole movie. It's easy when you think about the story of it, my guy is scarred from his childhood of being raised by a teenage dad who had no clue what he was doing. But you know Sandler, he's always kind of lovable.

How do you feel if people look at the poster and say this was the part you were born to play?

I've said that myself. I've said to him many times before. Before he decided to do the movie, I was like, "You owe me this." [Laughs.] "This is a movie about you having a kid who's about 12-15 years younger than you who kind of looks like you and is a comedian."

He owes you.

Well, he could have gone a different direction, but certainly there was no part out there for me that was going to be any more perfect. Maybe if my actual dad starred in a movie.

How would that go?

I think it would be poorly received. [Laughs.]

Where does this fit into the next phase of your career? You have "The To-Do List" and "Celeste and Jesse Forever" coming up. (He's also set to star in the six-part comedy "Cuckoo" for British network BBC.) Do you want to stick to comedy, or would you do a role that wasn't comedic at all?

I would do it if somebody wanted me to do it and I felt like I connected with the character and could do a good job. That was kind of how "Celeste and Jesse" came about. ... But comedy is my first love. It's the reason that I have any success is because that's all I've ever really wanted to do is comedy. If other stuff happens great; I'm not like beating down people's doors trying to get nominated for Oscars.

I know you've been talking a lot about leaving "SNL." You said "It was my time," and you talked to Lorne after the season's last episode. When did you start thinking about leaving, and when was the moment you felt like you knew?

I guess I started thinking about it just this past season. The contract when you first get signed for the show is seven seasons, and I knew that I was going into my seventh season. I didn't really know until I was on the phone with Lorne saying it because no matter when you leave it's going to be the hardest decision you make.

Did he try to persuade you to stay?

Not really. He's been through it so many times, I think it was definitely more emotional for me than it was for him. I think if I had wanted to stay he would have been cool with that too. The show always finds a way. He's got an eye for talent and I'm excited to keep watching it, and I love everybody there. I'm going to miss everybody a ton. I'm eternally grateful to have been on it. When I first got hired I would tell people it's like when you're a kid and you're like, "I'm going to be an astronaut or I'm going to be shortstop for the Yankees." Things that just don't happen actually did happen for me. It was insanely awesome.

What, if anything, would have had to have happened to make you want to stay?

I don't know. I don't know exactly even how to answer that. It just sort of was a decision I made. It wrapped up nicely for me with the 100th short and "Lazy Sunday 2." I'm excited to maintain a relationship with the show. And we'll see what happens.

You said this might not be the end of digital shorts for you. Care to elaborate?

Well, we'll see. It's obviously totally open-ended right now. I'm not going to be in the cast, but my hope is that there's times for me to come back if Lorne would have me. That's going to depend on what's going on with the show at any given moment, and week to week. I also hope that we make another Lonely Island record. If we make videos for that, I would love to have them still air at "SNL." I always consider that my first home. I don't want to put any pressure on Lorne. Whatever he wants to do. We're going to keep making short-form videos that are both musical and comedic in some way, shape or form.

And if they want to air them great, if not that's OK too.

Yeah. There's always YouTube. And possibly both.

You grew up loving Adam Sandler films. What about his movies do you like, and have you continued throughout his career? You mentioned this movie hearkening back to his early movies. Have you liked the new stuff as much as the old stuff?

I have. Certainly my sensibility, if you know any of my work, is a little closer to his earlier stuff. A little more wacky, surreal, dirty, etc. But I've enjoyed his other movies a lot. One of the crazier movies he's made recently is "[You Don't Mess with the] Zohan," which I love. That movie made me laugh a lot.

That made me laugh a lot too.

He high-fives a pelican within five minutes. It's like, "Oh, yeah, this is my kind of movie." [Laughs.] But this movie definitely is the craziest thing he's done in a while. It's exciting because he wears many hats. He can make family movies, he can make dirty movies, he can make "Punch-Drunk Love," which is in my opinion one of the best films made over the last 10 or 15 years. It's an incredible movie and he's incredible in it. He has that range and he chooses to try a bunch of different things. I appreciate what he does in all of them in a different way. But from a comedy perspective this is my favorite version. [Laughs.]

Do you think people take stuff like this too seriously? I'm sure people are already grumbling about the teacher-student relationship in "That's My Boy," and this wouldn't be the first Adam Sandler movie you could look at where overweight characters generate some laughs or there are some potentially sexist views, depending on who's watching. Should people forget it and laugh?

I think if that's the kind of thing that bugs you, this probably isn't your taste. Everyone has their own personal sensibility ... It's a hard-R, shocking, crazy party movie, that's just what it is. If you're in the mood for that, crack a brewski and go to the theater. And I feel like the majority of people that see it do really enjoy it and laugh their asses off. My family came to the premiere. They're not uptight, but my mom's in her 60s and she laughed her ass off.

Your dad didn't say, "I should have been in this"?

[Laughs.] Comes full circle. He got ripped off. He should have played Donny Burger.

Bad monkey! 'Rock of Ages' director spills baboon secrets

The Wrap

It's never easy directing Tom Cruise and his baboon.

Ask Adam Shankman, the director of "Rock of Ages," who lived many perilous moments in the filming of the rock musical that opens Friday, but none so much as when "Hey-man" the baboon got loose and then bared his fangs a centimeter from the face of his leading man. From London, Shankman discussed the star-studded tribute to 1980s hard rock.

Tom Cruise really sings in the film?

One thousand percent. We were very, very clear with each other: We would not do this if he couldn't do something great. I didn't want people laughing at him. We ran into each other at a birthday party for a toddler of a friend of ours. We were talking about his loving "Hairspray," and he said, "When are we gonna do our musical?" I thought, "Never." Then this came up; it was irresistible to ask him.

Has he sung before?

Not seriously. He has some opera singers in his family, so he's genetically predisposed.

He studied his brains out and found a whole new skill set. If the man wanted to perform in a circus, I bet he could.

Well—was it "sweetened"?

He was insistent on that. No sweetening, no autotune.

Did he show up fully formed as Stacee Jaxx?

It totally evolved. It's all based on documentaries we watched. The monkey is based on Bubbles, Michael Jackson's chimpanzee. There was some Jim Morrison. It was one piece at a time.

Hmm, a monkey. Did you have any disasters on the set?

One day the baboon got loose, and he was running up and down the street yelling at extras. We had to stop for 20 minutes and wrangle him. ... He's very sweet. Very sensitive. Tom Cruise did a scene where he was actually talking to the baboon—it's not currently in the movie—and he had his face really, really close. Forehead to forehead. I was shivering. But the baboon loves him. Every day we wrapped, Tom would hug me and shake me and say, "I am having the best time, thank you."

How did you cast the rest of the movie?

They were all curious. "Hairspray" brought me cred. And as soon as they heard Tom was doing it, basically anybody I asked said, "Yes."

I told Alec Baldwin, "You play a club owner on the Sunset Strip, and you've been stoned for so long you didn't realize you were gay." And he was in. I said to Russell Brand, "You play a sweet, lovely sidekick to Alec Baldwin who then becomes his boyfriend. And Russell said, "I'm in." I said to Catherine Zeta-Jones, "Just play Eva Peron." It's my little wink at the musicals.

What about Diego Bonato, who plays Drew?

It was just like "Hairspray," with Nikki Blonski. I'd be combing through auditions on a casting website, and one day, there he was.

Sarah Silverman: 'Great for women'

Comic hilariously torpedoes our preview of her Just for Laughs gig

By Kyle Kramer

FOR REDEYE

Notorious potty-mouth Sarah Silverman is infamous for her role in urging people to elect her socialist idol Barack Obama in a 2008 video called "The Great Schlep," but she's also chipped away at common American decency with her notably vile stand-up act and her propagandist Comedy Central show, "The Sarah Silverman Show." This year, she'll further corrupt America's youth with the animated movie "Wreck-It Ralph" and the indie film "Take This Waltz," but first she's promoting her liberal agenda in a Just For Laughs showcase Saturday.

RedEye caught up with Silverman, who tricked us into talking politics, shared some insights on her favorite comedians and pretty much crushed the premise of descriptions like the one above with general awesomeness.

Since your act can be so inappropriate, do people come up to you and say really inappropriate things?
 People ... tell me the grossest things, and I know it's because they think I'll like it, so I'm forced to, like, swallow my disgust and go like, "Oh, ha ha ha ha, yeah, that's great." And it's like "Ew! I'm a lady!"

Somebody on Twitter sent me a picture from a textbook, like in Texas or something, a real textbook. And on the page—this must be for kids!—it's describing the two meanings of "offensive." And one is a football player, like, on the offense, and then one is me! You're teaching kids that I'm the definition of offensive? Show a picture of like, the Real Housewives of wherever. That's offensive. That's unacceptable behavior for women.

I think I'm great for women. I think I'm a better role model for little girls than white-wine-drunk housewives being [bleep]-y to each other. Or the behavior of grownups judging people for who they love. What's more offensive?

Oh my God, I've torpedoed this! I get so political, and I get so charged and not funny! That's why I don't talk politics in my act because I think I would lose sight of comedy. Don't worry! It'll be [bleep] jokes and vagina jokes! KYLE KRAMER IS REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

You single-handedly won the election for Obama in 2008; is anything in the works for the 2012 election?

I don't know. I mean, that idea [2008's "The Great Schlep"], it was perfect. I still believe in Obama and everything, but I think what's going to mobilize people, like actually mobilize people is—I hate to say it—is the threat of the alternative. It's like a choice between some hope of progress and really going back into the '50s. I mean, the first thing [Mitt] Romney said he was going to do is turn over Roe v. Wade! So it's kind of a little bit of a horror movie.

Speaking of abortion rights, your show, "Sarah's Pro-Choice," is what we're previewing. Can you talk a little bit about the comics you picked?

Ugh, they're just the best comics, the choicest comics. To me, they're all like so magical; they make me laugh so hard. Reggie Watts is just, like, bizarre and amazing and you

How to look white hot

Los Angeles Times

The MTV Movie Awards broadcast always brings spectacle—both onstage and on the red carpet—and this year's show was no different.

On the red carpet, stars opted for short, flirty dresses or pants for the occasion instead of more formal gowns. "Gossip Girl" star Leighton Meester had the evening's most confidently relaxed yet polished look in her cream-colored ensemble by Christian Cota.

Meester looked chic in her sleeveless jacket, shorts and silk print top. She accessorized with Neil Lane jewelry, a buff-nude envelope-style clutch by Jimmy Choo and buff-nude, suede Brian Atwood heels. Her pulled-back hair and bright poppy lipstick were perfect complements to her casual chic summer attire.

You can get Meester's white-hot summer look for less.

FAIR PLAY

Bar food goes carnival-style with cotton candy, Cracker Jack and fried Twinkies

By Emily Van Zandt

REDEYE

Summertime can bring back childhood memories of days spent roaming the state fair, ice cream cone in hand, begging mom and dad for one more funnel cake. Or maybe that was just a Norman Rockwell painting we saw once. Whatever your nostalgia trip, summer fests come with iconic snacks—ones that are none too kind to the waistline. In a nod to those indulgent classics, local bars have been adding a touch of whimsy to their menus by playing off carnival favorites. Here are a few to hold you over until the next time you're surrounded by bumper cars and Ferris wheels.

EVANZANDT@TRIBUNE.COM
@REDEYEDRINKS

COTTON CANDY

The Barrelhouse Flat

2624 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-857-0421

With such fancy drinks and bites on the menu, it may throw you off to see daily cotton candy options scrawled on the specials board. This Lincoln Park cocktail parlor bounces between nostalgic flavors such as strawberry-bubblegum or more funky kinds, including chartreuse, bacon, root beer and IPA-flavored piles of fluff.

FRIED TWINKIE

The Anthem

1725 W. Division St. 773-697-4804

In the world of fair food, the deep-fried Twinkie is king. This Wicker Park sports bar serves one topped with Oreo cream for an extra-caloric bonus.

'CRACKER JACKS'

Stout Barrel House & Galley

642 N. Clark St. 312-475-1390

There may not be a prize at the bottom of your bowl, but this mix of caramel corn, pork rinds, wasabi peas and spiced almonds ($6) will go down just as quickly as the boxed variety that served as its inspiration.

'Cracker Jacks' at Stout Barrel House

ICE CREAM SANDWICH

Telegraph

2601 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-292-9463

At this Logan Square wine bar, you can upgrade your childhood favorite (chocolate-chip cookies with vanilla ice cream, right?) for a more sophisticated version featuring strawberry semifreddo squished between two Bavarian sugar cookies, finished off with cream cheese frosting and sunflower-butter crunch ($8).

SAUSAGE ON A STICK

Roots Handmade Pizza

1924 W. Chicago Ave. 773-645-4949

Ah, meat on a stick—the portable protein is a summer essential. This West Town pizzeria offers grilled half sausages (choose from Italian, bratwurst or Vienna) on a stick for $3. Upgrade to a batter-dipped corn dog or pastry-wrapped "blanket" version for $1 more.

KETTLE CORN

Lady Gregory's

5260 N. Clark St. 773-271-5050

The sweet-and-salty popcorn usually seen toted around in oversize bags gets a foodie boost at this Andersonville tavern: It's drizzled with truffle oil and served in a snack-sized portion for $3.

FRIED OREOS

Racine Plumbing Bar & Grill

2642 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-871-1600

While other bars have hopped on the trend more recently, this Lincoln Park pub has been channeling the we'll-fry-anything practice of state fairs since it opened two summers ago. Battered and deep-fried Oreos (3 for $4 or 6 for $7) are best described as a melt-in-your-mouth puddle of chocolate, we're told. Fried cookie dough and a fried Twinkie also are on the menu.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

SEEN ON THE SCENE AT ... DRUMBAR, 201 E. DELAWARE PLACE

You know you're at a hot new hangout when there's a long line of scenesters at the door and Radiohead—yes, Radiohead—is in the building. This all went down on Saturday night when we checked out Drumbar, the rooftop lounge on the top floor of the Raffaello Hotel. —CRAIG SEYMOUR

BILL HOGAN/
TRIBUNE

Drinks for Dad

Chicago Tribune

"Over the years your dad told you plenty of stories, so tell him one. Don't just pull a bottle off the shelf and stick a bow on it. Give him a little bit of knowledge as well." So advises Andy Borbely, manager of the "whiskey oasis" of Seven Saints, a world-class whiskey bar near the University of Illinois campus in Champaign. A self-proclaimed "scotch nerd," Borbely focuses less on age statements and points ratings, and more on the unique history of his more than 260 whiskies. Borbely's Father's Day suggestions run from entry level to premium, each one steeped in story.

Cardhu ($45) or Aberfeldy ($40)

If dad drinks a blend, such as Johnny Walker Black, try introducing him to one of its 12-year-old single-malt backbones, such as Cardhu or Mortlach. If he prefers Dewars, encourage a side-by-side tasting with Aberfeldy, the heart of that popular blend.

Eades Highland Double Malt, 2nd edition ($50)

This is a refined, high-character combination of 10-year-old Clynelish and Ben Nevis single malts, aged respectively in Chateau Lafitte and Grenache Blanc wine casks. Technically, this is not a single-malt, but it is a far cry from the typical blended scotch that often includes cheap grain-whiskey filler.

"I think very highly of Eades both by virtue of what is in the glass as well as ... that their packaging has very insightful explanations of exactly how their whiskey is put together."

Edradour 10-year-old ($50) and Sassicaia Finish ($90)

The smallest distillery in Scotland, Edradour produces only 12 barrels a week. Borbely suggests using the slightly sherried, creamy 10-year as a baseline to compare some of Edradour's experimental, barrel-finished offerings.

"When you're only making 12 barrels each week, it's a bold maneuver to age even a few of them in a rum cask or a sascaia wine cask."

Ardbeg Uigeadail ($70)

Pronounced "Oog-a-dal," everything about this silky, non-chill-filtered Islay scotch is enormous, from the body and depth to its cask-strength—108 proof. If dad likes smoke and peat, this is the one.

"The initial flavors of peat and cedar wood yield to a brief sweetness of fresh grain and sweet spice before smoke envelops the palate and carries through the finish," Borbely said.

Gordon & Macphail Strathisla 30-year-old ($200)

Many scotch drinkers have yet to explore independent bottlers, such as Gordon & Macphail, that buy whiskies from various distilleries and then age them in their own barrels. This offering is a favorite of the Seven Saints staff.

"While most of the whiskey produced at Strathisla is blended into the Chivas portfolio, some of the very best casks are held back and released as single malt offerings. The perfect marriage of malt and barrel influence give rise to a unique and delicious flavor of black walnut pancakes."

Snapping food pics? Chefs say: Go for it

Chicago Tribune

When did we start taking pictures of our food? On a base level, taking photos of our food is a visual reminder that will trigger taste and olfactory memories down the road. Now, apps and social media sites such as Instagram and Pinterest have turned food photography into high art.

Which begs another question: What do chefs think about cameras in restaurants?

The chefs we spoke to view photography in restaurants as the new normal, and brief annoyances from a camera flash are outweighed by the powerful word-of-mouth effect.

Because most food shots find their way onto social networking sites, many chefs call it the best type of free advertisement.

"It's priceless," was how chef Johnny Besh of Evanston's Bistro Bordeaux described it. "I used to work at L2O, and there was a lot of photography happening there. You'd think a place that's super fine dining and formal, their approach would be to refrain flash photography. Actually, we strongly encouraged it, because the food was so beautiful."

Said GT Fish & Oyster's Giuseppe Tentori: "To be honest, it's kind of flattering, because they appreciate what we do. They wouldn't post a picture of something they didn't like."

Only once did Tentori tell a customer to stop taking photos. "There were a group of tourists going to all the Michelin-starred restaurants. They came to Boka and were taking too many flash pictures. I had to ask them to stop, but only because a customer asked me to."

Marty Fosse, who runs three restaurants in Andersonville including Anteprima, says he only gets annoyed with restaurant photography if it's at the expense of food getting cold.

"But things have changed so much," Fosse said. "It's such a common practice to see people shooting food, we're really used to that now. Anyone who's taking pictures in food has an interest in food."

The lesson here reflects most other things in life: Moderation is the key.

RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

HEALTHY MEN AND WOMEN 18-55 YEARS OLD FALL ALLERGY SYMPTOMS

DO YOU HAVE HAY FEVER IN THE FALL?

Researchers at the University of Chicago are conducting a research study to see whether an experimental nasal spray (not approved by the FDA) is safe and can reduce the signs and symptoms of allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

If you have a history of allergy symptoms only in the fall, but do not currently have any symptoms, and are skin test positive to ragweed you may be eligible to participate in this study. A screening visit, lasting about 2 hours, will take place at the Nasal Physiology Laboratory at the University of Chicago and then two additional study visits will be conducted.

If you are interested, please call 773-702-5889 for more information.

You will receive compensation for your time required to complete the study visits.

Dietary cleanses: Are they safe or starvation?

Los Angeles Times

To the rational mind, the notion of willingly depriving oneself of food for days on end seems illogical, at best. Basic biology, after all, dictates that calories are necessary to sustain everyday functioning and that low levels of, say, iron or potassium could throw off our physical health, possibly even dangerously so.

And yet, even the most practical among us are trying extreme dietary cleanses. Somewhere along the line, we bought into the idea that our bodies harbor toxins that need flushing out or that dropping weight via an all-liquid diet is somehow medically sound.

So how have these regimens become so popular? What's so enticing about them? And do they actually do any good?

Kinds of cleanses

For anyone looking to embark on a cleanse, there's no shortage of options: juice fasts, water fasts, lemonade diets. A company called BluePrint Cleanse, for instance, sells three to 10 days' worth of juices made from ingredients such as kale, cashew nuts, apples and pineapples. Another, Ritual Cleanse, follows a similar program of organic raw juice, promising on its website potential benefits that include mental clarity, weight loss and increased sex drive.

For the starstruck among us, there are celebrity-endorsed cleanses. Gwyneth Paltrow, the incurably buoyant actress and mother of two, swears by the Clean Program, a 21-day eating plan consisting of a shake for breakfast and dinner, and a light lunch. Salma Hayek co-founded the Cooler Cleanse, a program that professes on its website: "Consuming only liquids for a few days frees energy in the body, which can then return to the essential jobs of deep inner cleansing and healing."

And then there's the Master Cleanse, which tells users to ingest only a mixture of water, lemons, cayenne pepper and maple syrup up to six times a day for 10 days.

What the pros say

So is there anything healthy about a dietary cleanse? Dr. Adrienne Youdim, the medical director of the Weight Loss Center at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in L.A., doesn't think so.

To begin with, she says, our bodies are equipped with everything they need to rid themselves of bacteria, chemicals or viruses.

"The body actually has a very intricate way of detoxing on its own," she says. "Our liver is designed to clear toxins out of the body. Our kidneys are designed to clear toxins out of the body. Our gastrointestinal tract itself has mechanisms to clear toxins from the body. There really isn't any reputable science to suggest that there is any health benefit" to cleanses.

As for the weight loss promised by a week of liquid dieting, Youdim notes that any poundage shed on a cleanse is likely to be temporary. What's more, she adds, cleanses done repeatedly might actually cause the practitioner to gain weight in the long run.

So why do it?

The question remains, then, as to whether cleansers know that there isn't much science behind their diets and do them anyway, don't know about the lack of science at all or simply don't care about the science.

In an essay for the website Thought Catalog, editor Ryan O'Connell describes his attempt at the Ritual Cleanse. He decided to try the juice fast, he says, after reading another writer's account of it. But O'Connell, 25, harbored no illusions about the health benefits of the cleanse.

"Let's not get it twisted—it's total crap," he said. "It's starvation nation. It was more of a personal goal, like, 'Let me see if I can do this.'"

"Research looking at the potential benefits of natural, plant-based ingredients?"

I'd like to know more."

Radiant Research is seeking individuals who are overweight for a clinical research study examining the potential benefits of natural, plant-based ingredients. Qualified participants will receive all study-related care and study supplements or placebo (an inactive substance) at no cost. Compensation up to $200 for time and travel is available to those who qualify.

Michelle Tanner
—er, the Olsen
sisters—are 26.
Speaking of twins ...

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen used to be everywhere you looked on "Full House"—now they're just everywhere you look, period. The media mogul twins turned 26 on Wednesday, defying our belief that they'll never grow up. We took the opportunity to check in with the sisters, other famous duos—and a couple of sibs so close, they might as well be twins. TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED
DANCHAN@TRIBUNE.COM
@REDEYEdana

About those other 'Twins' ...

Danny DeVito and Arnold Schwarzenegger, of course! The brothers have been separated since the 1988 flick, but rumors were circulating in March that they'd reunite for "Triplets," with Eddie Murphy as their long-lost third bro. This could be one wacky family reunion—hopefully they still have their matching Hawaiian shirts.

Tamera Mowry-Housley (left) and Tia Mowry-Hardrict

The identicals burst onto the scene with the '90s sitcom "Sister, Sister" and currently have a self-titled reality show on Style Network. Sadly, they neither dress identically nor in those huge floppy hats anymore.

Ashton Kutcher and Michael Kutcher

Ashton was the bigger of the brothers at birth and has the bigger celebrity name. But Michael, born with cerebral palsy, has a larger mission in life as a board member for the Reaching for the Stars foundation. Ashton, unfortunately, is much less classy than his bro these days.

YOU GOT IT, DUDE!

Ashley (left) and Mary-Kate

After buying out their entertainment empire, Dualstar, which sells $1 billion in merchandise every year, the twins shot to huge riches on top of their fame. They've been on Forbes' richest celebs list since 2007, and have an estimated combined net worth of $300 million. The entrepreneurial duo received an early birthday gift: a Womenswear Designer of the Year award from CFDA Fashion Awards for their fashion line, The Row.

Scarlett Johansson and Hunter Johansson

Scarlett is setting the acting pace with credits including "Horse Whisperer" and "Iron Man 2," with brother Hunter trying it out in "Manny & Lo," which also featured Scarlett. She's now making a big-screen splash with "The Avengers" and probably glowering over ex-hubby Ryan Reynolds hooking up with Blake Lively. He ... was one of People mag's hottest bachelors of 2008. Guess who's winning.

Angelina Jolie and James Haven

No, they're not actually twins. But after their infamous Oscars kiss in 2000, we wouldn't have been surprised. Angelina, obviously, has her every move documented these days. James was last spotted on the red carpet for her directorial debut, "In The Land of Blood and Honey." There was no sib smoochage.

50 shades of merch

The ladies are lustin' for "50 Shades of Grey" this summer—and pretty soon, they'll be able to read it while wearing lingerie and laying on sheets both inspired by the book. THR.com reports that author E.L. James has picked a licensing agent to create products based on the book, including lingerie/sleepwear, apparel, fragrances, beauty products, bedding, home furnishings, and stationery, jewelry and adult products. We're positive no men will find this even remotely creepy.

Head games

If you spied a familiar head on a stick during scenes from the first season of HBO's "Game of Thrones," you're not alone. A rubber replica of former President George W. Bush makes a cameo in several scenes. "It's not a political statement," the creators say in a DVD commentary, according to huffingtonpost.com. "It's just we had to use whatever heads we had around."

Mark Wahlberg
GETTY IMAGES

“They’re going to give me whatever credits I already have, which is probably like one or two ... but I’m going to make it happen.”

—Mark Wahlberg, to David Letterman, on pursuing his high school diploma online. Wahlberg said he dropped out in the ninth grade.

She's teething

The makers of the "Twilight" franchise finally have revealed the end product of interspecies sexual activity: an 11-year-old girl. Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart take to the cover of Entertainment Weekly with their on-screen offspring, newcomer Mackenzie Foy. Foy will play a half-human, half-vampire child who can apparently go from baby to tween in 90 minutes. Best contraception ever.

HOT DATE SEPT. 18

That's when Chicago DJs The Hood Internet will release their first album of original material. The record, titled "Feat," will feature guests including Chicago rapper Psalm One and A.C. Newman of The New Pornographers.

Bad break

'Ye had kind of a bad day Wednesday. Police confirmed that Kanye West's L.A. pad was broken into while he was away on the Watch the Throne tour. mtv.com reported, though it was unclear if the thieves made off with any of his goods. As long as Kim Kardashian is OK, we'll rest easy.
